*Your Mind.
Our Community.
Endless Possibilities.*

The Department of Psychology & Counselling, Faculty of Health Sciences, The Open University of Sri Lanka, is pleased to announce the establishment of the Psychology Student Society and warmly invites undergraduate students to participate in its inaugural meeting.

This initiative marks a significant milestone for both the Department and the Faculty, as it introduces the first student-led society within the discipline of Psychology. The Society has been established with the intention of creating a vibrant academic and collaborative platform that supports student engagement beyond the traditional classroom environment.

The Psychology Student Society aims to provide undergraduate students with opportunities to actively engage with academic discussions, professional development activities, peer collaboration, and community-oriented initiatives.

The Society is expected to function as a bridge connecting students, academic staff, and professionals within the field. Through seminars, workshops, student-led projects, awareness programmes, and collaborative activities, students will be encouraged to strengthen their academic interests while also developing important interpersonal, organizational, and leadership skills.

Importantly, the inauguration of the Society also creates a space where students themselves become active contributors to the academic culture of the Department. Students will have the opportunity to participate in the appointment of office bearers and contribute towards shaping the future direction and activities of the Society.

All undergraduate students of the Department of Psychology & Counselling are warmly encouraged to participate in this inaugural event and become part of this important beginning.
